South Australia's forest industries are an important part of the state's future. The sector's record of success and innovation underpins its contribution to South Australia's economy. The industry is a key driver of our state's economic growth and supports more than 21,000 jobs in the Limestone Coast and elsewhere. That's why my government is investing $19 million to help grow and develop the state's forest and timber industries, amid a broader investment of more than $130 million in the region. SAFPA continues to provide essential support and advocacy on behalf of those involved. The association makes a significant and meaningful contribution to important debates around climate change, use of wood products, education and training and growing the plantation estate in South Australia. The Government considers itself a friend and supporter of the forest products industry.

South Australia's future economic success relies on growing our forest industries, creating more jobs, new business investment and improved standards of living. SAFPA has a vital role to play in meeting those challenges and also seizing the opportunities, through strong advocacy and public policy debate. The South Australian Opposition looks forward to working closely with SAFPA to grow a stronger future.

Nathan Paine

CEO of South Australian Forest Products Association

The Governing Council of SAFPA has been working hard on behalf of the industry to formulate and advocate the right policies that will maximise benefits for the industry and we are pleased with what we have been able to deliver with the Government.

As a long term industry, we are building solid relationships with Government, the Opposition and across the chambers to ensure the right policy settings are in place for the forest industries to grow.

The South Australian Forest Products Association exists to represent the forest industries in South Australia generally and its members specifically.

As CEO of the Association I am pleased with how we have been able to secure strong policies from the Government for the industry as well as being able to focus on the needs and issues of my members.

Whilst working to secure the implementation of the State Government's forest industries policy, we will continue to advocate for our top advocacy priorities which is all about helping the industry grow for generations to come.
